Operant conditioning

Operant conditioning, sometimes called instrumental learning, was first extensively studied by Edward L. Thorndike (1874–1949), who observed the behavior of cats trying to escape from home-made puzzle boxes. A cat could escape from the box by a simple response such as pulling a cord or pushing a pole, but when first constrained, the cats took a long time to get out.

What is "common sense"?

In my experience, the phrase 'common sense' is often used in situations where a person is waiting for instructions or does not act rather than using their initiative (as opposed to acting ...

Motivation

Motivation is the reason for people's actions, willingness and goals. Motivation is derived from the word motive in the English language which is defined as a need that requires satisfaction. These needs could also be wants or desires that are acquired through influence of culture, society, lifestyle, etc. or generally innate. Motivation is one's direction to behaviour, or what causes a person ...

Spaced Repetition for Efficient Learning

Spaced repetition is a centuries-old psychological technique for efficient memorization & practice of skills where instead of attempting to memorize by 'cramming', memorization can be done far more efficiently by instead spacing out each review, with increasing durations as one learns the item, with the scheduling done by software.

Midwest Center for Fraud & Bullshit | The OCD Diaries

Cleaning out the trunk of my car yesterday, I came across a stack of cassette tapes from a period in my life when I was so desperate I'd spend stupid sums of money on anything to remove my fear and anxiety.. These tapes were part of a program that cost me some $450.
